Education in Schools should be about free choice instead of by force

Commentary and Opinion Editorial by Brian D. Hill

Some very well-known experts and geniuses was viewed by the public school system that they will never succeed or had a very poor public and academic education test scores but have ended up inventing things that would blow the world right out of the water. Some of those genius enough but probably condemned by the public education system was Albert Einstein, Ed Leedskalnin the creator of Coral Castle, and geniuses that doesn't fit the curriculum.

In fact in 1895 Albert Einstein's teacher said to his father: "It doesn't matter what he does, he will never amount to anything" yet Albert Einstein created a lot of knowledge and changed the world as we know it today.

The same goes with Ed Leedskalnin which figured the secrets of the pyramids, secrets of the universe, created a radio system that interfered with the Homestead Air Reserve Base and caused the US Government to pay him a visit, and yet he only had a fourth grade education.

In fact I was also considered like a troublemaker with the school system because I was different then the other students. Then at some point I found my calling which is what led to this website being created. If a psychiatrist were to examine me they would say I have Oppositional Defiant Disorder, and other kinds of disorders and reprogram me to always be compliant to whatever society masters dictate.

The public schooling system is against free thinkers unless they can bind it to their curriculum or agenda. The public schooling systems discourages rebel thinkers and those that don't quite fit into boxes for society to use. Schools don't like it that I wanted to refuse poisonous vaccines and are also against home-school because it takes away their control over the students minds. That is why there are many great efforts to try to make home-schooling illegal or make it as strict as the well mind-controlled public school system and try to squash open opinions and free thought.

This is exactly why the public education system is failing big time and it ain't just piles of homework being given to students but also public schools follow orders and don't allow the students to decide what to learn but of course that changes with college since they aren't under the control as the public schools are. Schools need to be more of based on free choice and what kinds of knowledge you want to learn instead of forcing all kinds of knowledge down our throats because if we don't give kids reasons why they need to learn certain knowledge they will just take it in for the tests and then forget about it which I did as well. I pass the tests just to get through it then forget what I learned since it was forced upon me.

In fact this video below explains the problems with compulsory learning instead of choosing what to learn and why certain knowledge should be taught in schools.

Most geniuses throughout history including ones I know that aren't famous all are brilliant by making their own waves instead of staying with the school group. What I mean is people who are different and smarter will want to find stuff out for themselves, question their reality, and ended up learning things they would never learn from any public school or textbook. Is it wrong to be different? Is it wrong to think freely? Is it wrong to peacefully rebel against compulsory acts against us? Isn't it up to our choice, to free choice that allows us to accelerate in life and become successful while others are working corporate slave jobs under slave wages. It is those that will never conform why we have the invention of the Internet, why personal and powerful computers even exist, why we look for ways to cure our own illnesses while the system just wants you to take a pill, and why discovering are made everyday that society just overlooks.

It is us different thinking people who can, will, and have changed the world as we know it. That is why Adolf Hitler, Mao, Stalin, and Mussolini killed millions of people who were different or did not conform to their standards because it was them that could threaten the power of their government and would topple to all the citizens instead of a powerful Stasi-style dictatorship.

To be free to be unconformable to their agenda it is time that public education becomes about free choice instead of mandatory learning. In fact education based on the children's needs and wants can actually go farther. In fact when I was a kid I was into running a newspaper at one time which meant that in the future I would run a news site since I showed signs as a kid that running a newspaper or news site was what I wanted to do as it allows me to be very creative and professional at the time not to mention I get the truth out then get thanked by many that appreciate the work I do. Those that become successful don't always have a perfect educational or test scores. Some become successful by choosing what they learn instead of the choices being made for them. I am one of those examples!

Free choice should be the way of the future for education!
